Workforce Edge Partners with ADUSA Distribution & Transportation on Education Benefits

Video Transcript

Mikayla Evenstad: What differentiates Workforce Edge from others in the industry is that we were born from an education company, so we've lived and breathed education for over a hundred years. We can also provide really great access to quality education, both traditional and non-traditional.

Workforce Edge has a lot of unique features that help employers and employees maximize that education benefit process - some including the application for the benefit itself - all the way to submitting funding for that benefit. So it creates a lot of visibility to employers on where that spend is going for employees.

It also provides a very streamlined process to apply for that benefit, and manage that benefit throughout their time and their program. But then they're also able to access discounts through the education marketplace that Workforce Edge provides. So that's a really great benefit to employees because they can see those dollars go further.

Thomas Grant: For our actual associates, using Workforce Edge has been an incredibly easy process. Again, the most difficult thing that we heard back from them was just how hard and clunky it was to actually get access to tuition reimbursement previously.

So Workforce Edge has made the process incredibly easy, and we've seen our numbers actually go up from a utilization perspective on the actual benefit.

Becky Griffin: My experience using Workforce Edge has been just an amazing experience. The chat feature, the support that they provide - it really helps with the user, getting their documents complete, getting the information in.

Before Workforce Edge, we were a paper-driven tuition reimbursement, so finding my manager completing the paperwork and getting signature approval was definitely a challenge.

Denise McNeely: Workforce Edge has been an excellent partner for us. It's very easy to send the associate to them. They answer all of their questions.

So we in turn don't have to be experts in it ourselves. They are the experts.

Tammy Coleman: I would recommend Workforce Edge, and I have done it several times through our orientation classes. I make that like one of the key benefits why you should join the company. All the way down from a GED to your master's, you can achieve your goals through this process. I think it's a great opportunity to further your education, and it's wonderful that the company really invests and empowers our associates to do so.
